- Renata Makarova, head of revenue management, Halldis Spa, Italy

Junius De Silva, director of revenue, The Sebel Melbourne Docklands and Residencies, said: "Winning this IDEaS-sponsored, prestigious scholarship through Cornell University will further amplify my efforts in curating a revenue culture within our hotels as we shift from traditional revenue management toward strategic revenue management. This scholarship will enable me to create awareness, share knowledge and inspire the future revenue leaders of our industry.”

Jana Vystupova, revenue optimization manager, Bohemian Hostels & Hotels, said: “I’m excited to study at the renowned Cornell University. Having learned revenue management mostly on the job so far, this IDEaS scholarship provides a fantastic opportunity for me to deepen, structure and enhance my knowledge to be on top of my game. In this complex and critical field, the competitive advantage comes from a combination of analyst skills, knowledge and strategic use of data and tools.”

Dr. Ravi Mehrotra, president, founder & chief scientist, IDEaS, said: “A key part of IDEaS’ mission to drive the future of revenue management is ensuring the brightest minds are given opportunities to lead. Our ongoing relationship with the hospitality program at Cornell University bridges business and academia to recognize and promote the next generation of hotel revenue leaders, worldwide.”
